Notes on Contributors

RICHARD BYERS is an Assistant Professor of History at North Georgia College and State University in Dahlonega, Georgia, where he has taught since 2003. Trained as an aviation historian, his interests include modern European history, modern Germany, military history, and historiography. He has written several reviews for journals including Technology and Culture and H-German, and is currently revising both a manuscript focusing on the career of aviation pioneer Hugo Junkers, and a multi-volume work examining the role of women in world history. He has also written several articles for the recently-published Oxford Encyclopedia of the Modern World.

WALLACE HETTLE is an Associate Professor of History at the University of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls, Iowa. He studies the Southern U.S., and the politics and culture of the Civil War in the United States. He is the author of The Peculiar Democracy: Southern Democrats in Peace and Civil War (Athens, GA: University of Georgia Press, 2001). He is currently working on a book on the changing image of “Stonewall” Jackson in biography and popular culture.

JEMMA PURDEY is a Post-doctoral Fellow in the Centre of Southeast Asian Studies, Monash University, where she is researching and writing a biography of Herb Feith as part of a broader study, “Ways of knowing Indonesia: Scholarship and engagement in the Australian academy.” Her other research interests include violence, transitional justice and human rights in Indonesia. She is author of Anti-Chinese Violence in Indonesia, 1996-1999 (Singapore: NUS Publishing, 2006).
RICHARD FILIPINK JR. is an Assistant Professor of History at Western Illinois University who earned his doctorate from the State University of New York at Buffalo. He specializes in Cold War American history, researching and teaching on American diplomacy and politics. He is completing a manuscript on Eisenhower’s post-presidential influence on American foreign policy. His most recent publication is “‘Force is the Last Method’: Eisenhower, Dulles, and American Intervention in the Suez Crisis,” Critique 35 (August 2007): 173-188.

PROFESSOR HANS RENDERS is director of the Institute of Biography at the University of Groningen in The Netherlands. Among his publications are biographies of the Dutch poet Jan Hanlo (1998; second edition, 2007) and of the journalist and writer Jan Campert (2004). He regularly organizes conferences around biographical theory, and is supervising several biography-centred PhD theses. He also works as a biography critic for the Amsterdam-based newspaper Het Parool and the Dutch weekly Vrij Nederland. Information about the Institute of Biography (in English and Dutch) can be found on the institute website at www.biografieinstituut.nl.

DON HOWARD is Professor of Philosophy and Director of the History and Philosophy of Science Program at the University of Notre Dame. A Fellow of the American Physical Society, co-editor of the Einstein Studies series (Birkhäuser), associate and contributing editor of The Collected Papers of Albert Einstein, and co-founder of HOPOS, the International Society for the History of Philosophy of Science, his work focuses on the history and philosophy of twentieth-century physics, the history of the philosophy of science, and, of late, the social relations of science and the philosophy of science. Recent publications include The Challenge of the Social and the Pressure of